PIANO LESSONS

Developing an ability of playing the piano enhances math skills, giving children an advantage in science, engineering, and other math-related subjects. These studies revealed a link between piano training and the brain that improves the academic areas for a long-term effect. Piano students also demonstrate an increased sense of responsibility, mental discipline, self-esteem, and a life-long appreciation and enjoyment of music. Students are prepared with an emphasis for college entry level.

Lessons will be provided during the school day and after school. Private piano lessons will be taught by Thomas Hanes and Jamil Bryom. Lessons are provided to students in preschool thru eighth grade. A recital is given each year to demonstrate the student's mastery of skills. Lessons will start on September 7, 2011.
